Our students are thriving.

Disruptions in the classroom now, and kids who used to struggle tell you that building relationships and taking time to listen to their needs, motivate them, and show compassion.

What’s the best part of your job?

In my role as a special education teacher, the greatest part is helping students find the ways in which they learn best. I currently work with a special education class of 11 sophomores at Mount Pleasant, and I have the unique opportunity to work with students who have intellectual disabilities, autism, and cerebral palsy. So my job is to be mindful of their needs, motivate them, and show compassion.

What’s a challenge that you or one of your students has faced?

A lot of our students along too. They ask about their friends if they miss a day.

How would you describe your students?

My students are amazing! They work hard and want to do their best in everything they do.

What’s your favorite part of your role?

I love the moments when students make real results in the classroom.

What’s the best part of your job?

In my role as a special education teacher, the greatest part is helping students find the ways in which they learn best. I currently work with a special education class of 11 sophomores at Mount Pleasant, and I have the unique opportunity to work with students who have intellectual disabilities, autism, and cerebral palsy. So my job is to be mindful of their needs, motivate them, and show compassion.

What’s a challenge that you or one of your students has faced?

A lot of our students along too. They ask about their friends if they miss a day.

How would you describe your students?

My students are amazing! They work hard and want to do their best in everything they do.

What’s your favorite part of your role?

I love the moments when students make real results in the classroom.